PRESS RELEASE

Lionfield Expands its Staff and Services

Lionfield adds new technicians to support managed service program for clients

Exton, August 8, 2007: Lionfield Technology Solutions, Ltd. has hired three field technicians and a help desk technician to help service their growing customer base. Wayne DeHart recently joined Lionfield after relocating from Virginia. DeHart, a graduate of ECPI Technical College in Roanoke, VA, has 7 years of combined experience in system analysis, network administration, user support, and technical troubleshooting.

Jim Thompson will manage client networks in addition to troubleshooting various technical issues. Thompson is a Microsoft Certified Professional and Microsoft Certified Systems Engineer and is proficient in a variety of areas, including network design and installation, firewall configuration and remote access.

Brant Rider will also serve as an additional Field Technician, bringing several years of experience in IT hardware, software, networking and web design. Rider is a Microsoft Certified Professional and is currently working toward a B.S. degree in Information Technology from Kaplan University in Davenport, IA.

Darlene Mancaruso has been hired to monitor Lionfield's Help Desk and provide remote IT support. Mancaruso is proficient in a variety of operating systems, holds a BS degree from Centenary College, and also earned a diploma in Network Support Administration from Cittone Institute in Philadelphia.

In addition to adding staff, Lionfield has also introduced LionCARE, a managed services program offering a new level in customer benefits. LionCARE lowers overall costs, increases efficiency, boosts security, and features a client service web portal enabling customers to email service requests and check account status online.

"We're delighted to add these highly trained technicians to our staff to support LionCARE and ensure our customers receive outstanding service," said Matthew Matosky, president of Lionfield Technology Solutions.

Lionfield Technology Solutions, Ltd. is located in Exton, PA and offers information technology support and services to small and mid-sized businesses.
